EUA at a glance

With more than 850 members, including both universities and national rectors' conferences, the European University Association (EUA) is the largest and most comprehensive organisation representing universities in Europe. As the voice of European universities, EUA supports and takes forward the interests of universities and the sector as a whole.

EUA provides unrivalled opportunities for members to share best practice by participating in projects, events and other mutual learning activities involving a wide range of universities. EUA's website, briefings and newsletters keep members well-informed about these activities and European developments which impact on their activities.

Above all, EUA provides members with unique opportunities to influence and shape future European policy and initiatives affecting higher education and research. Through its work and contacts with the European Commission, Parliament and other key decision-makers, EUA ensures universities' interests and concerns are taken up with all key stakeholders.

How EUA is governed

President

- The President, elected every four years by members, leads and represents the association.
- The Board appoints two Vice-Presidents to deputise in his/her absence.

Board

- Nine current or former rectors (including the President). Four members are elected every two years by members.
- Supervises the implementation of EUA policy and work programmes.

Council

- Presidents of the national rectors' conferences.
- Adopts EUA policies and positions and defines overall priorities.

General Assembly

- All EUA members.
- Elects the President and Board and determines the strategic direction of EUA.

Secretariat

- Based in Brussels, EUA's secretariat (around 40 staff), managed by the Secretary General, ensures the daily management and implementation of all EUA's activities.

What we do

EUA serves over 850 members
in 47 countries

Influencing decision-making at all levels: EUA represents universities' interests and lobbies on their behalf in the development and revision of European policies, programmes and funding instruments. EUA formulates evidence-based policies, studies and reports – using information collected from members – as input to policy debates on issues crucial for universities.

Enhancing institutional development by sharing expertise: EUA organises a wide range of mutual learning activities – including projects and events. These are designed for universities to share best practice, knowledge/insights and seek advice on key issues they have identified: such as funding and financial management, governance, quality assurance and management, lifelong learning and collaborative research.

Acting as the voice of European universities globally – promoting global partnerships via dialogue and projects, and ensuring the visibility of Europe's universities worldwide in global events, networks, and organisations.

Become a member

EUA has different categories of membership depending on whether applicants are universities, national associations of universities or other bodies active in higher education or research. The category of membership determines annual fees and voting rights.

All applications for membership are first reviewed by EUA's Membership Committee and then passed on to the EUA Council (three sessions a year), that takes the final decision. Membership is granted for the whole institution or organisation, including all academic and non-academic staff.
